

Access to Justice Tools and Resources for Sole Practitioners and Small Firms- Presented at LSO Access to Justice week
Access to Justice Tools and Resources for Sole Practitioners and Small Firms, presented at LSO Access to Justice week

October 26, 2021

If you're a sole practitioner or work in a small firm, you know all too well that balancing your time and available resources are essential to providing the best service to your clients. In this case study, participants will learn how to efficiently and effectively use legal research tools.

Moderated by Joan Rataic-Lang, the Executive Director and Library Director of the Toronto Lawyers Association, participants will be guided through the case study with sole practitioner, Fred Glady.

They will then be joined by Sandra Levin, the LA Law Library Executive Director, to learn about how the library carries out its mandate to support access to justice for members of the public through cooperative and coordinated programs with other justice sector participants.
